

MAURETANIA HAS FALLEN

French Stopped After Taking Two Alsace Towns

PASSENGERS HERE, SAY MAURETANIA WAS FIRED ON BY WARSHIP AT SEA

TOURISTS TELL OF TWO SHOTS HURLED AT FLEEING LINER

The Cunard liner Mauretania, which docked at Halifax Thursday, was fired on twice by an unknown warship the night before she entered Canadian waters, according to stories told by three saloon passengers who reached Boston last night.

These were Miss Mildred Corson of Hartford, Ct., J. R. Surbrug of New York and David Montgomery, the actor. Wallace Pierce, the Boston merchant, and Francis B. Allen, the Boston architect, were told by the first officer that the ship had been fired at twice.

The Boston and New York passengers talked about the affair excitedly on their arrival at the North Station. They told of how the entire ship's company believed the vessel was being pursued.

All the passengers who arrived last night were bitter in their denunciations of their treatment at Halifax. They had only the highest praise for Captain Charles and his crew.

One of the passengers who heard the two shots was Miss Mildred Corson of Hartford, Ct. Miss Corson was a member of the party of Mr. Wallace Pierce of the firm of S. B. Pierce & Company, Boston. Mr. Pierce was accompanied by his son, Vassar Pierce, and his daughter, Miss Virginia Pierce, who had Miss Corson with her as a companion.

STARTLED BY SHOTS.
The young women were on the hurricane deck, when they noticed the Mauretania, which had kept up a standard speed of twenty-six knots, suddenly circle to the north. Miss Corson said:

"We had been strolling on the hurricane deck, enjoying the moon, when I heard a distant rumble followed by a second. There was no mistaking that they were the shots from a heavy gun, but they seemed some distance away."

Wallace Pierce, the Boston merchant, said:

"Two shots were heard some distance from our stern about 11 o'clock on Wednesday night by many of the passengers, who talked about it. Miss Mildred Corson of Hartford, who was in our party, heard the shots distinctly. The first officer also told us that two shots had been fired at the Mauretania."

J. W. Surbrug, a New York tobacco importer, said:

"Everything went nicely until Wednesday night. It was around 11 o'clock when I heard two reports which sounded like the firing of cannon in our wake. Others heard it also. Some of the passengers had noticed a searchlight flashing on the water, but I did not see this, as I was below most of the evening. It was directly after this that Captain Charles changed his course and headed north. We did not know what we were making for until we landed in Halifax next morning. Here we were accorded the most shameful treatment."

John E. Liggett, a director of the Maine Central Railroad, said:

"It was common knowledge that we were pursued by a couple of warships, but our ship traveled fast in fog and clear weather. Francis B. Allen, a Boston architect, said: 'The first officer told us that we had been fired upon twice.' All of the passengers who arrived last night were very angry over their treatment in Halifax. They said nothing was done for their comfort. John E. Liggett, one of the passengers, said he heard the first officer bring forty passengers to Boston. The passengers paid their own fares. This is to pay back the Bostonians."

ENGLISH TROOPS LANDED IN BELGIUM

PARIS, Aug. 8.—According to an official announcement, 20,000 English troops have already landed at Calais, Ostend and Dunkirk. They are now on their way to Namur on the route to Liege to reinforce the Belgians.

WAR BULLETINS

ROME, Aug. 9.—The Italian government has been informed by the governments of Germany and Austria that if Italy persists in her attitude of neutrality Germany and Austria will consider themselves free to declare war. Austria in that case, her government states, will invade Lombardy and Venezia.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—Five hundred thousand Russian soldiers, supported by 700 guns, crossed the frontier on Friday and invaded Germany, according to a dispatch received by the Standard from its St. Petersburg correspondent today.

BRITISH LAND BIG ARMY ON CONTINENT; FRENCH CLAIM LUXEMBURG VICTORY; 500,000 RUSSIANS INVADE GERMANY

According to a Berlin cable via Amsterdam and London, received at midnight, Kaiser Wilhelm has announced the fall of Liege.

All Berlin is wild with excitement over the news.

Dispatches from Brussels declare that the Germans, after suffering a third defeat, had retreated and were supposedly planning to enter Belgium by another route.

London cables stated that communications between Liege and Brussels had been broken about noon on Saturday. This and the further fact that the English and French censors passed the dispatch telling of the Kaiser's claim of victory are construed in London as confirming the report that Liege has fallen.

Washington war experts think that the German attack on France on the Liege route is only a feint and that the real attack is to be delivered in the southwest, where the Germans can be more speedily reinforced by the Austrians.

The somewhat fragmentary dispatches from Berlin via Amsterdam and the detailed story of the fighting from Brussels are given below:

BRUSSELS VERSION

BRUSSELS, Aug. 8.—The Germans have abandoned the attempt to capture Liege. With the entire army of invasion hurled back once more today in a terrific assault upon the Liege fortifications, a movement of German troops across the Meuse was begun tonight.

The plan now apparently is to pass around the forts towards Vise and between Liege and Huy.

The German aim to attack the Belgian army before the arrival of French reinforcements, which are hurrying forward under forced marches.

A general engagement between the Germans and the French and Belgians is imminent.

The French have already effected a partial junction with the Belgians, and a French army of 200,000 is reported to be approaching from Lille.

At the same time it is reported that the German Crown Prince, Frederick William is leading a large force of Germans in the forward movement against France.

The Seventh, Ninth and Tenth German Army Corps, said to number 125,000 men, engaged in an assault on the Liege forts today with General Von Emmich in personal command.

The German loss thus far, for the four days' fighting, is reported at 20,000 and the Belgian 8,000.

Soldiers returning from the front report that the trenches around Liege are literally filled with the bodies of Germans. In some places the bodies are piled four and five deep.

The Belgian infantry, cavalry and light artillery surprised and practically annihilated a division of German cavalry that forded the Meuse. Seven entire regiments of Germans were either killed or captured.

The Belgian loss was also heavy.

The renewed assault was made this morning, following the refusal of the Belgians to grant the requested armistice of twenty-four hours. The Belgian commander declared he feared the Germans would use the time to bring up reinforcements.

King Albert, in person, commanded a brigade of Belgian cavalry which attacked the German flank, hemming in the invaders between the advancing Belgian troops and the forts.

The flying French cavalry column opportunely reinforced the Belgian defence.

Repeated and brilliant charges were made by the

BERLIN VERSION

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, Aug. 8.—A report that Liege had been captured spread with lightning-like rapidity throughout Berlin tonight and created the greatest enthusiasm.

Count Von Bethmann-Hollweg, the imperial chancellor, drove to the imperial palace tonight and congratulated the Emperor on the great victory. He was cheered vociferously all along the route.

The Emperor sent an aide to announce the triumph of the army from a balcony of the palace. Crowds had waited there from the time the earliest reports of the victory arrived.

The newspapers say that henceforth false reports of German defeats printed in foreign publications will not affect the people nor conceal German triumphs.

The Lokal Anzeiger says:

"It confirms our confidence that we can calmly await coming events. It was the prelude to deeds which will be spoken of as long as men live on earth."

LONDON, Aug. 8.—A dispatch from Maastricht to the Central News says:

"Fifteen wounded Germans were brought here today. They said that while not all the fortresses around Liege were in the hands of the Germans, the fortifications of Liege itself had been captured. Other reports received here say that the Belgians have retaken the Liege fortifications."

LONDON, Aug. 8.—Following a report from Berlin, received via Amsterdam, that Liege had fallen this (Saturday) afternoon, a dispatch was received from Brussels, dated Saturday, 9 p. m., stating that communications between Brussels and Liege had been cut and that neither telegraph or telephone communication could be had either to Liege or to Tongres, eleven miles north of the besieged town.

FRENCH TAKE TWO ALSACE TOWNS AND ARE THEN STOPPED

PARIS, Aug. 8.—Altkirch, in Alsace, taken by the Germans in the war of '71, has been retaken by the French after a brilliant assault. It is reported that the German position was carried by storm after a violent engagement, in which both sides suffered serious losses.

The German forces left in full retreat, pursued by the French troops in the direction of the great German

arrived here in the embassy train on

I am now able to transmit a detailed account of the first day of war in Berlin.

On Tuesday, shortly before 7 o'clock, Sir Edward Goschen demand-

England was in a state of war with Germany. The news of England's declaration first appeared in a bulletin of the berlin Telegraph about 8 o'clock. I went straight to the British Embassy where ring-leaders, comprising about twenty young men who had been one another on their shoulders to the level of the first floor windows, set feet above the footpath, smashed the panes with heavy stones. Missions were thrown at all the panes.

All the windows with the exception of two were broken. The attack was repeated until past midnight, when a Spanish diplomat from the em-

RESUMPTION OF OCEAN TRAFFIC HAILED WITH JOY

Longshoremen and Shippers Prepare for Rush Canadian and Other Liners to Sail.

The news that steamship traffic between Boston and Britain would be resumed at once was received with joy by shippers, 2,000 longshoremen and hundreds of others whose living depends upon the foreign traffic of the port.

The Franco-British mail steamer

the only one of her kind, was loaded passengers who were booked with a huge cargo of foodstuffs.

The chief item of her big cargo was flour, which was to be used for the relief of the famine-stricken regions of the Balkans. In addition to flour, she carried large quantities of other foodstuffs, and other provisions. The cargo list will maintain its regular fortnightly service from now on.

CANADIAN TO SAIL TUESDAY.

The liner controlled by the International Mercantile Marine Company will sail from Boston at once. The Leyland liner Canada, which was to have sailed yesterday but had her departures delayed, has resumed sailing on her outward cargo, including a big shipment of wheat, and will sail

Tuesday.

The White Star liner Arabie will sail on her schedule next Tuesday if her departure can be postponed on Monday at the latest. The Wilson & Phipps-Leyland liner Canada will sail on Monday next. Prince and the Leyland liner Iberian will sail for Manchester the following day. The Red Star liner Mantova, for Antwerp, is scheduled to sail yesterday. The Marquette of the same line will sail on Monday.

Lawyer's Widow Bitterly Denounces Lawyers; Suggests Hard Work to Ease Mind.

Mrs. Lillian W. Glover, wife of the murdered laundress of Waltham, says she is being hounded by law.

San Francisco Officials Think Celebration Will be Helped by the Situation.

BLOCK ISLAND, Aug. 8.—The "nightmare" dance has been the tangle in island circles here. Professional gamblers are barred as they look too much money from the island, and fifty-cent limit is indulged in by "guests." In fact, anything goes as far as the natives are concerned, and law and order is an unknown commodity.

Non-residents have a unique if not a lawful way of riding the tangle in island circles here. They come along and keep their tails out of the tangle, and the tangle is the thorough understanding. To call on the police force is to interfere with the tangle, and the tangle is the thorough understanding. NATIVES NOT LOGIC ACQUAINT. Little is known of the native diversions of the island. They are too much for the logic of the natives to select their own form of entertainment to tell the history of their lives.

Woman, 104, with Broken Hip, Finds Life Good 'BORDER OF REVENGE' HAS POLICE RECORD TO REDEMPTION

Michael Shapiro, Who Claimed Losses Embittered Him, Said To Be Old Offender.

Tranquility and a Christian Life Secret of Longevity, Mrs. Rowell Asserts.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT. When a woman 104 years old, laid up with a broken hip, can smile on the world and life in general and declare it is "very good after all," then it seems it surely must be.

At any rate Mrs. Frank Rowell of No. 12 University road, Brooklyn, who has just celebrated her 104th birthday, who remembers the 104th birthday, who remembers the 104th birthday, who remembers the 104th birthday.

Character

Here's a Car That Has It Distinctly

1915 MODEL 21 WINTON SIX

Even in thick streams of traffic, the Winton Six stands out distinctly as a car of character. From its unseen and almost unheard motor to the finishing touches of color and coach details, it evidences the class of the man whose monogram it bears. The 1915 design is particularly fresh and beautiful. Have you seen this fashion plate of motor cars?

Cast Aluminum in Body Building

The use of aluminum by automobile manufacturers has become pretty general in the last few years, but there is only one company that uses cast aluminum exclusively in building its touring and enclosed bodies.

This is the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Company. The Pierce-Arrow factory has been using cast aluminum since 1905. Its use, at first, was confined to dashboards and doors, as it was thought that the pure aluminum could not be cast thin and adding of other metals made it too heavy. Later experiments showed, however, that pure aluminum could be successfully cast in any size and as thin as one-eighth of an inch or thinner. This made it possible to make bodies lighter than the sheet metal construction by casting and this kind of body was found to have many advantages over any other material.

Just a Little Week-End Stuff

By J. Willard Connelly

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company. Great Britain by permission.

It is a vexing problem these grimy Summer days to decide just what to do with one's Saturday afternoons and Sundays. Often one feels as if one simply must get away and feel the sting of the fresh country air and the caress of the lilac breeze.

After our frugal luncheon of beer, ice cream soda and kindred accessories last Saturday we felt a bit despondent. Sort of a dazed, even if it means suicide, feeling. So, of course, the natural outcome was a trip some place on the New Haven R. R., that Route of All Evil.

Somebody had recommended a lovely little place full of peppy Summer stuff down on the Sound—beyond New Rochelle, near New Haven, beyond Redemption. We thought there was a good chance of getting killed in that distance, all right, so we made our will and left the United States. Someone will surely make a rush for the map of the world now and try to depict where we went. Wait a minute. Don't bother, because it's too hot to dally with your map this week. We'll tell you. Its name is derived from the old German—a bathing beach on the Sound—hence, Soundbeach.

But there was no wreck—honest—and now we're sore on the No Heaven R. R. for letting us live.

We were about to die saluted New Haven when we arrived there, because we never expected to live through it. No widows' and orphans' dividends were squandered on the New Haven station. At first glimpse we thought it was a roundhouse, but then we realized that an self-respecting locomotive would allow itself to be seen in there. Besides, there were no men around wiplog up.

O, Pittsburgh! What sins are sounded in thy name! Thou art as far as blacked ice and as chaste as snow that's never been chased. You stood up amidst the evilness of that New Haven Railroad station in Pittsburgh, we could get away after stopping a few blocks of clouds, but in New Haven we were lucky to pull away from there, with nothing larger than bricks of coal hanging on our eyes.

There is a legend down that way and it's working today. It's a good little legend, to the effect that many a great football player lately on entering a place called Yale has stayed right on the train until he landed at Harvard, through sheer fright at the horrible New Haven city state.

We pushed on sturdily to Soundbeach, for we were in week-end and all there, you know. By trolley across the wild Connecticut waste. We stood up in the car and embraced the straps and posts, as in dear old subway days. There were college boys on the car, with much tan, and with a line of conversation all to the rah-rah-rotten. They were extra short haircuts, had letters or figures written on their raiment, and other resemblances to convicts in general.

We registered at the Soundbeach Inn, after having had many a feminine ha-ha shot at us as we passed by the adjacent tennis courts. And on the endless floor we ran a gauntlet of dowagers armed with their terrible loganberries.

The room we drew was one of these cells where the roof sneaks in at a generous angle on the side, and deprives you of many a cubic foot of breeze. The mosquitoes held their annual convention banquet (as usual) in that room that Saturday night. There was a big delegation from Jersey, and a few million Mormon mosquitoes from Utah. In the morning our viages looked like a new golf ball, only the bumps on it were red, not white. We slapped ourselves so much during the night we dreamed we were in a Turkish bath.

Sunday we batted all day, and, though we didn't need it, got our ears full of water, which wouldn't come out. And we got our hair full of ash, and our arms, shoulders and legs broiled lobster-hued. We didn't attempt to drown ourselves, because a lot of these human water-rats were hanging around, and two or three of them would have saved us sure. Carnegie medals are grabbed off too easily these days, anyhow.

On Sunday evening, after all the guess, including myself, had gorged themselves with everything on the menu from the name of the hotel at the top, to the line, "Food served in rooms charged extra" at the bottom, a nice fiend and a plane penitentiary draped themselves in one corner of a large hall and offered up a concert. Some sentence. Read it again, to be sure you don't miss anything.

The singer was crowding seven feet in height. He looked like Mt. St. Elias. We are sure there must be snow on his head all the year round. Still, he couldn't help that. He was a good fellow withal. His one vice was his voice.

And there's this much to be said about the pianist. She kept her back turned to the listeners. Her face was not her fortune. Her eyes didn't work in double harness very well, but one eye took all. They made her out a bit of a vaquero. While massaging the piano keys, she executed about the most consistent piece of head wiggling we ever witnessed. It was for all the world like one of these little Japanese imitations whose head, when touched, goes bobbing up and down a hundred or so trips.

They attempted Liast. That is, they assayed putting the Liast in lieten. But most of the glances shot at the singer seemed to say, "Sit down, you're putting a list in the hat."

There were a good many fat old mothers around, making the rocking chair creak and creep. In two and three they were going "Wha-wha-wha-wha-t-t-t-t" behind their lace. Here and there was an old-eyed aunt, frowning like a very bloodhound with her cheeks sagging heavily.

We tried to look as blasé as the colored maid who stands in the store demonstrating the new sanitary bed for the baby. We felt much more blasé, or blasier, whichever it is.

Then we rambled off to bed. And didn't we ramble. The corridors of time that the poet raves about must have first seen in a Summer hotel. They ought to pay you by the hour for the time consumed finding your room. And when you get there, you have to go all the way downstairs again for ice water, because the bell-boy current is turned off at 9 p. m.

The next morning we went in on that early train. A lot of easy girls in Panama hats and sex, and midday blouse and midday skirt, stood on the porch as we departed and chorused "Aren't you sorry you're not going to be here for your vacation?"

New York as a Summer Resort

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company. Great Britain by permission.

Compiled by Lewis Allen, Press Agent for Father Knickerbocker.

NOTE—We waited patiently and purposely until all other papers got around to spring their annual whoppers concerning Littlefield New York City as a Summer Resort. Now that they have plucked their blurb, we will tell you all about it, the truth, the whole truth and some other data.

NO MOSQUITOES

THERE are no mosquitoes in New York City. They never have a chance. What with all the tradesmen continually presenting their bills, the poor mosquito has no opportunity to present his. And what with paying a nickel to stand in a howling street car or subway, a quarter for the privilege of allowing a boy to toss you a best hat as a duty shell, a half dollar to a waiter who snubs and sneers at you and keeps you waiting two hours, you are so badly stung the mosquito must have the heart to sting you more.

NO MALARIA

Malaria is unknown in New York. It is something you can get for got it. Leave it has absolutely no place in the city. And there is no need of it. You plunge feverishly into the gavies of the city, and you are certain of a chilly reception everywhere if you haven't the price. This makes up the chills and fever of the city, and malaria is always too late and cannot make an impression.

SCENERY

Some rave about the Alps and some about the rugged shores and some about the pastoral scenes, where the dunes abound and the innocent little calves meander about the greenward. Come to Central Park and see the little calves meander about the greenward. Stroll along the Rialto and see chickens. Drop into our burlesque houses, our musical comedies and our vaudeville houses and gaze upon the beauties of nature undisturbed.

There is no other Summer resort in the wide world where there is so much to see. If you doubt it, watch the scenic beauties mount the spiral steps of the buses or swing on to the high-top surface cars. Gaze upon the great talcum deserts as they seem to swirl around and about before your very eyes at the tango parties. See the long green, cool and refreshing, as it changes hands night after night up and down the white way. Gaze upon the pools down Wall street way, watch the tebbing groups of humanity, behold the Cuban folds, the Lewards, the Al Woods. At no other Summer resort in the world is there so much to see. Come here and get back to human nature.

BOATING

In New York City boating is a general pastime. Every one must paddled his or her own canoe. It is all ferry well to paddle about in an old tub on a mill pond, but come here and secure a little smack of your own, get a new two on what's doing. Once in a while you see a scoundrel-crafted craft, but they do not thrive here. A little cutter is the thing. Note how many trim little craft sail majestically up and down the streets. See the thousands of schooners which daily cross mahogany bars. There's a dandy on every corner, a cruiser in every lobster palace, and a flotilla of white-jacketed third-deckers on every hand.

BATHING

Some plunge into the limpid country ponds, others dive into the briny deep, still others splash about in private pools; but for the best bathing come to New York City. Come and plunge into the whirlpool of merriment, come and dive into the midst of the streams of merry-makers, come and swim down the stream of humanity. If you cannot swim do not come, for there are no life guards here. It is a little swim or swim. Take a plunge in Wall Street. If you are good at the underhand stroke you will keep your head above water. Stand in front of any apartment house any red-hot night and listen to the cool splash of the breakers against the porcelain sides of the tubs, or hearken to the musical clatter of the shower baths. There are no pebbles to hurt your feet, no sharp get in your ears, no Antiochian-cuckoo cops to murmur against your costume. Come to New York prepared to soak somebody—or get soaked.

CLIMBING

Did you ever struggle up the well-known Matterhorn in the equally well-known Alps? Did you ever wonder up Mount Washington or Pike's Peak? Then come to New York City, where the real climbers are. What is panning up a slippery, steep ledge, with the aid of a guide, a rope, compass and struggling up the sheer, cold, marble, scabbish, chilling side of Society, in an effort to reach the top? You go to the Alps and you struggle for a day or a few days at most, and then you come back. You come to New York and you struggle after year after year to climb into society. You slip back, you try to bridge financial crevasses, you try to mount (perron) placers. Your guides are a few near-billionaires, your alpenstocks are a bank account with many figures in it. If you do not care to climb Society Heights, you may like to enter the New York City car and climb over it and climb over it and enter in take a week off and cross the street where they are excavating for another subway. If you do not want to climb up, get an auto and go down and under. There are more methods of climbing in New York City than in all the mountain ranges in three hemispheres.

RUSTIC WALKS

Go to the Pennsylvania or the Grand Central station and watch the rustics walk in. You see more there in a day than you will see in the country all Summer.

WILD FLOWERS

The fields and dale, and meadows and hills and dunes and other sections of the country have a few wild flowers, it is true, but the freshest are right here in the city. "Fresh" is no name for them. You see the great white Daisies, Myrtles, Violets, Roses, Hyacinths, Pansies. The greatest variety in the world flourish here. We have red velvet (Pinks) also black velvet (Violets), blood Pansies and other kinds too numerous to mention. And there are no signs along Broadway reading "Do not pick the wild flowers." New York doesn't care. You come to New York and you take chances, like every one else.

RATES

The rates at this celebrated Summer hotel all depend upon your roll, your credit and your ability to put up a shirt and get away with it. If your wife is in the country, why go with her to get the discounts of home? If you live in the city, why go elsewhere to be cheated?

Hashimura Togo Tackles the Tango Tea

Being the Letter of a Japanese Boy-of-All Work to the Editor of GOOD HOUSE-KEEPING MAGAZINE. Published by Permission of GOOD HOUSEKEEPING MAGAZINE.

To Editor "Good Housekeeping Magazine," who must realize the extreme difficulty of keeping home dull:

DEAR SIR: I have leaped so continuously from jobs to jobs since you last heard from me that I am becoming a very talented leaper. The nearly last place to which I was attached reported me away before I could say good-bye to my lady at the time while company was late to leave. My lady at the place was kind but I am sure she was following the letter of the law in not waiting for me. To Who This Was Sent— I am introducing you Mr. Togo (return). If you can do anything, please treat him as I did.

Next place where I took it was home of Mr. Mrs. & Mr. Van derbilt Jones, residing in very good location, near the Aspic Falls, N. J. This hotel was not so formal that it makes me feel quite English while approaching up to it. I was included into the entrance and the butlers, who were Mrs. Van derbilt Jones, crystallized lady of exquisite beauty, arrive there and require, "You understand, now we are here."

I am sure that I am serving here with enthusiasm. I am sure that I am serving here with enthusiasm. I am sure that I am serving here with enthusiasm.

I am sure that I am serving here with enthusiasm. I am sure that I am serving here with enthusiasm. I am sure that I am serving here with enthusiasm.

I am sure that I am serving here with enthusiasm. I am sure that I am serving here with enthusiasm. I am sure that I am serving here with enthusiasm.

I am sure that I am serving here with enthusiasm. I am sure that I am serving here with enthusiasm. I am sure that I am serving here with enthusiasm.

Where to Go—By A. E. Hayward

BUNKHURST COTTAGE, that haven of the tired business man, Eden of the worn city dweller, announces its welcome for the season. Situated on a bluff of ten miles from the end of everything, near nothing, it lies there serenely on its bluff—and just lies, and lies, and lies.

Bunkhurst is only ten miles from the railroad station, and there is a mail once every week regardless of the weather.

We announce that Bunkhurst Cottage has been completely remodelled for the season 1914, assuring our patrons of many little extra comforts. A bathroom has been (52-14-1) and all the rooms are papered.

Miss Samantha Sutchface Will Be With Us Again This Season.

Mrs. Brown, the Proprietress of Bunkhurst Cottage, and the Dog.

Every room overlooks the hall. All the mattresses have been turned since last season.

The dining room has been rearranged so as to accommodate twelve comfortably instead of nine, as heretofore, and a new screen has been placed in this dining room window.

In issuing its welcome to the vacationist this season the management of Bunkhurst Cottage has taken into consideration to a valuable addition to our dining service—a dumb waiter—thus eliminating much of the labor of the dining room help, which has been the source of occasional complaint.

The installation of a dumb waiter also makes sure of permanent help throughout the season, for the man came to us unable to say where he was going, and is now unable to say where he wants to go.

Bunkhurst cottage has been fortunate in securing the services of Mrs. Tillie Toodles, who created such a furore in our hotel last year. Mrs. Toodles will be remembered as the author of the famous "Special Menu" last year. Everything is so well cooked as to cause comment.

The delightful intimacy and homelike atmosphere of Bunkhurst Cottage needs no words of praise to our patrons.

Every body knows everything about Bunkhurst Cottage. The name is reasonable, and two weeks with us seem all too long. Special rates for unattached young men. The drinking water has been analyzed with remarkable results.

Testimonials from former guests: Dear Mrs. Brown—

I stopped at your place last season and will never go to any other country place, believe me!

Sincerely, S. D. L.

Dear Mrs. Brown—

Have just received the pair of garters you sent. I thank you for your kind interest, but I did not lose a pair of garters; I lost a package of hairpins. Hoping to find you the same, sincerely, Lacy L.

Received your booklet, which reminds me that I can't get away this year, etc. I must say I never had such a time in my life and will always speak of it warmly!

behavior of feet. Considerable gentlemen then observed of considerable ladies and commenced dancing with stride-away expression of knees.

"If this is tea there is it?" I require from my lady. No answer yet.

We were required, Sherlock in search of that beverage which should be there. I could not detect appearance of steepage, cup-saucer, kum-yar, or other tools for making that hot sip. Yet some where, I could hear dice-box sound peculiar to small, nervous clattering together. O yes! I saw, only a bit later shaking up tea in silver jessies to I could see.

Pretty soon lady & gentleman arrive up full of concealing behind pain-burners. I observe considerable fustian from so much slouchy-clothy dance-say. "We will take slight tea," they demure from Mr. L.

"What variety, please?" he recurred seriously. "Married," snarled those couple. Then Butler pour more pairs of persons emerge up. More shakes with tea. More gobbles. More dance.

"It is tango who put the tea into tea," remonstrated one of the boys twirling by with lady. "You are very Bernard Shaw today, Liberty," she report back with eyes. "Of formerly it used to be deliciously difficult to compel men & husbands to come to tea. Now you expect keep them away with weapons. Why is that swift change?"

"When the tea goes out the tango's in," he define, attempting to wear wit under his mustache.

I was embraced by That Tense Englishman, Without Any H in His Voice. While Music Began To play, I saw that the tango was not so much slouchy-clothy dance-say.

It was very hard science to describe this tango-waltz when I saw it, Mr. Editor. It is similar to a minute danced by eels. Angry, elbows seem to be slipping around everywhere, while each lad and gentlemen seem to be walking sideways without intending to go there. Such chuckly movements of ducking away from music amid bounce! such clutch and jolt containing great poetry! I could not understand how persons could do this American flit-tut without injurious breakage of their personality. And yet no ambulance was called.

SAME THING.

THE YANKEE—If some one were so ill-advised as to call you a liar, Colonel, in what light would you regard the act?

The Kentucky Colonel—I would regard it simply as a form of suicide.

EMBARRASSING.

"THAT," said the Well-Informed Young Man, "is a garter-snake."

"That little thing?" exclaimed the Neatest Maiden, incredulously. "Is it so better? Did you get those little black pills I spoke to you about?"

Mrs. Newswell—Well, you see, the druggist had some awfully cute pink ones that just matched the darling's new dress, for sixteen cents, marked down from twenty-five, so I got those instead.

HE WAS RIGHT. ANTIQUATED FEMALE—My dear friends, I do not believe manslaughter should be punished by death.

"No," said a mean man in the audience, "it is bad enough that there should be one man less."

ONE ACTIVITY DECIDED UPON. "WHAT do you intend to do after you leave college?"

"Well, I haven't decided on anything definite for the first year, except to come back for the class reunion."

APPROPOS. AS the cable car swung around the corner the pretty girl who had been clinging to a strap, landed gracefully in the lap of a young gentleman perched for the evening paper.

"I beg your pardon," she said, blushing.

"The pleasure is mine," replied the young man absently.

JUST BICKER. THE cook of a snailly young vicar was strongly addicted to loiter.

When she washed down the stoop with some mork-turtle soup, he really was tempted to kick.

COUN'DN'T BE DONE. SHE—I wonder why Eve was not created before Adam?

He—The reason for that is plain enough. The Lord knew if he made woman first and then tried to get a man to suit her he might as well quit and go fishing.

BUT THEY GET IT. PAT—Pshaw! to me do you love dinner at home?

Mike—Well, on Sunday evenings we have it at noon, and on the other days we have it at night.

WHO CAN? MATH TUTE—How do you make Y equal X?

Porter—Well, if I knew I wouldn't be bustled to often.

THE GRAD'S LAMENT. IS This is the way five dollars looked when my father's cash I burned?

But this is the way that fiery looka now $5 that it must be earned.

HINTS FOR FARMERETTES.
MARY NEAL, of Phenix, post cards: "Why does Nature provide a cow with horns?"

A cow is provided with horns, my dear, so that she can be a boaster and not a knocker. They make very convenient handles for bills or for holding banks of yarn to be knitted up. In case of the cow's husband they are pretty handy to hang from the ceiling. If your cow is one of those dreamy-eyed things, with a star in her eye and a bowl of mush, you can lead her out into the yard and let her chew cuds at her horns for exercise. We are surprised that the 100,000,000 of Agriculture sent us this simple query. (Happy thought—If anything that has to do with horns requires the head.)

Mrs. O. U. Cheatum, of Skaneateles, wants to know: "How can I make a lazy hen get on eggs?"

This is not as hard as keeping a lazy citizen from setting on the coo-box in front of the village store. We can hardly understand your case, as generally it is a hard matter to keep a chicken from setting on everything, from a knock-knobby to a knock-knobby. Perhaps your hen is a suffragette. Lay a few bricks near her, and if she undakes to

Unpopular Songs

By William F. Kirk

"I'LL NEVER SPLIT NO KINDLING WOOD!"

Copyright, 1914, by the W. F. Kirk Co. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

A FAIR but freckled farmer's bride, with eyes so kind and gray, Was setting near the window at the close of one sad day. The supper should have been prepared and on the table then, Because her husband ate as much as any three hired men. There was no fire within the range. It seemed to stand apart Without a spark of any sort, cold as a lean shark's heart.

"Why ain't no supper ready?" her husband loud did say. His wife transfixed him with a glare, and these sad words she did say:

REFRAIN:
"I'll never split no kindling wood, For that is not my speed And if you want an axman, sir, You'll have to hire a Suede. I've acted as a true wife should, But pasted this in your hat, I'll never split no kindling wood— Bet all you've got on that!"

Her stunned and silent husband felt exceptionally smart. He went to split some kindling wood and cut off his right thumb. Of course, he felt it keenly, as you all can understand, It was the only thumb he had upon his good right hand. He gave his fair young bride the farm and made another start, With only one thumb to his name, but with an honest heart. He soon became quite wealthy in a city far away. And oft that bride regrets them words which she to him did say:

REFRAIN:
"I'll never split no kindling wood, etc."

Great Giants Series This Week Will Show Whether Braves Can Win the Pennant

By NICK FLATLEY.

This is the big week for the Braves. The series that decide the National League Pennant is scheduled. In New York, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, the Braves attack the Giants, who are in first place, but slipping.

Right on the heels of the leaders, playing far better ball than any other team in the country, the Boston outfit is anxious for the showdown. New York, going none too well, fears the clash.

Everything favors the belligerent Braves. After the New York games they will take another swing through the West. It was their last wild whirl around the trails that put them in the running.

In their home stand they have shown that they have the Western aggregations tamed. It seems a certainty they'll repeat out there next time.

As with most of the other cases, the first of the two corporations filed a lawsuit in the Superior Court of the District of Columbia. The lawsuit charged that the other corporation had stolen the idea of the "cash for junk" business and had started a competing business. The lawsuit also charged that the other corporation had used the name of the first corporation in its advertising and had used the first corporation's logo.

Small fields were to be found on the Greater Boston golf courses yesterday in the usual week end members tourneys. Most of the golfers who are still in Boston during the Summer months elected to go to the hall game, take a trip down the harbor, to some resort or go out to Longwood to watch the tennis matches. The result was that with the exception of Woolland members

Francis Guinet attracted considerable attention at Wollaston when he appeared there yesterday afternoon to play off the second round match.

FINANCE AND STOCKS
STOCK TRADING WILL BE RESUMED

But Governors of Exchanges Will Proceed With Caution in Reopening.

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stock trading may resume within a week, it is believed in some quarters, but the governors of the exchanges will proceed with caution in reopening.

There is no disposition to open changes in the country, but the reopening of trading is expected to be a gradual process, with the exchanges proceeding with caution.

How the Dis-

 Geraghty Is Making Money by Using

 Her Knowledge of What Society
 Likes to Eat

"A. Elsie French Vanderhill, Aunt No. 1.
 Who Doesn't Like Her Niece to Sell Vegetables."

MRS. JULIA FRENCH GERAGHTY, daughter of Mrs. Anne Tuck French and relative of the richest and most socially exalted persons in society, is making a nice little living by selling choice fruit and vegetables.

"Buy my nice fresh peas!" How the thought must jar Mrs. Geraghty's refined aunt, Mrs. Elsie French Vanderhill, and her other still more particular aunt, Lady Chylesmore, of England!

Little Mrs. Geraghty keeps on giving jolts to society. First she married "Handsome Jack" Geraghty, who ran an automobile at Newport and whose family did various kinds of honest work. Then she upset the gossips by living quite happily with her husband instead of crawling back home to be forgiven. And now she works, enjoys it and makes money at it!

"Handsome Jack" Geraghty, her husband, is one of the solid men of Woburn, Mass., and the success of his firm is the talk of the entire countryside.

"Jack" may have his fancy terriers and may direct in general the management of the farm, but the garden is Mrs. Geraghty's special pride. To it she gives much of her personal attention, and such are the results of the care she has lavished upon it that all the other Woburn gardeners admire or envy her.

Visitors to Boston who know where to dine well are quite likely to have succulent fresh vegetables from the Geraghty garden set before them.

Here are prices which Mrs. Geraghty obtains for her choice produce in the Boston market:

Beets, 5 to 8 cents a bunch; peas, 7½ cents a quart; celery, 10 cents a bunch; tomatoes, 8½ to 12½ cents a pound; corn, 15 cents half peck; beans, 5 cents a quart; cabbage, 5 cents a pound; cucumbers, 5 cents each; onions, 5 cents a pound.

The Geraghty garden is maintained, in the first place, to provide the best that can be had for the Geraghty table. The pickers go to Mr. and Mrs. "Jack."

Then come the Woburn neighbors of the Geraghtys. They know better than any one else how Mrs. Geraghty works and studies to make the produce from her garden appetizing. They realize how the garden has been laid out to provide the proper amount of sun and air for the growing of green things, and what watchful care is given it from early Spring until the gardening season is over. Therefore they insist on being served first after the Geraghty family has been provided for. The Geraghty farm is only a short distance from the centre of Woburn, and for that reason there are many families within easy reach who are eager purchasers of the Geraghty produce.

After the Geraghty table has been provided for and the wants of importunate neighbors have been satisfied, what vegetables are left are shipped to Faneuil Hall Market in Boston, enriching the Geraghty exchequer by a tidy sum. Thence they go to the tables of Boston hotels and of the people Julia French knew before she gave up the pleasures of society life to become a chauffeur's bride.

Many Woburn people have wondered at the ease with which Mrs. "Jack" adapted herself to the entirely new mode of life on a farm, and they appreciate thoroughly her ability as a gardener. She has been in Woburn little more than a year.

However, Mrs. "Jack's" career as a society belle has given her one advantage as a gardener that perhaps they do not realize. Certainly no one should know better than she what good vegetables are, for only the best in the market came to the French home. That knowledge has taught her how to get the best in her own gardening. The combination of the experience of the men employed on the Geraghty farm with her own knowledge of society's tastes has been responsible for the garden's splendid reputation in Woburn.

The Geraghty farm is one of the most attractive places in the town. Situated on Cambridge street, about a mile north of the Winchester line, it combines the attractions of the country with convenience to the city.

The house, a big white one with green shutters, stands in the centre of a well-kept terraced lawn. In the rear are various barns and outbuildings.

In such an environment it is not strange that Mrs. "Jack" has become a happy farmer's wife. Chance visitors to the place are quite as likely as not to find her assisting "Jack" in making repairs to the poultry sheds or supervising some of the many activities of the farm.

Similar scenes were repeated in the contest in Loyola between the French pugilist Georges Carpentier and the American champion Sam Langford. A disappointing feature of these contents is the organized emphasis for other purposes, and the lack of force in the way in which the true purpose of the meeting is presented. Just as the French women examined the muscles of the prizefighter, the other day in Paris, too, the Roman women inspected the bodies of gladiators before they went in the slaughter and examined their physical condition closely. The famous Roman writer tells us that however brave and ugly gladiators were, there was always women ready to adore them and to consider them as beautiful as Adonis.

At Pompeii, which was a recreation of the Romans, they had a scribbling on the wall preserved to today which speaks of one of the gladi-

Why does the love of brutal atrocities by women forebadow the downfall of the civilization? Is the reversion to savagery without the course and the impulses that inspire the original savage to strident unbridled violence? Is it the loss of brute strength and ferocity, war dances and barbarous display of all the weapons of war, that makes men and women who go to prizefights, they are all eager to risk their own lives and the lives of others in the excitement and endurance. Civilization is simply a process of replacing the impulses of brute force by the impulses of reason. Every primitive impulse of savagery worse than that of a bad or scalp hunt of the Indians is being crowded out, and that has been done.

In nearly every human being there is a latent impulse to savagery. The present, cruelly exercises a certain restraint on him. The suppression of this impulse is the great work of civilized morality. Many a man of refinement feels a curiosity to witness a scene of cruelty which he would not witness if he were a

Why You're Never Really Well If You Are Fat

ACCORDING to researches of Dr. Irving Phillips Lyon, of Buffalo, N. Y., to be permanently fat is to be sick. It may not be any serious illness, though there are very significant maladies associated with adipose tissue, yet every person who weighs much beyond a slender normal is undoubtedly below par.

Dr. Lyons divides people with superabundant flesh into six large groups. Those who are fat from disordered impulses sent from the brain to the nerves which control the flesh, is one type.

Another type of obesity which is misnamed "simple" or "usual" adiposity, due to trivial, native disorders of the adrenals, the pancreas, the bone marrow, the thyroid, the pituitary and the pineal glands. Fatal adiposity called "adiposa diobrosa," a malignant and death dealing overgrowth of fat, is another.

tions of lipomatous tissue in lumps at different spots is another. Fat neck, double chin, large hips, fat backs, flabby cheeks are among

Then there are the degenerative changes in the internal glands which cause fat to pile up in middle life and after typhoid fever or similar infectious maladies.

All kinds of body fat, says Dr. Lyon, point definitely to a connection with fat-causing troubles. No absolutely perfect or physically normal person can be fat, and every fat man, woman or child has some physiological defect, very commonly in the thyroid, pituitary or some other gland.

All adipose states of the human body are thought by Dr. Lyon to be almost identical although they may each seem to be distinct conditions. This prevalence of common features among all fat people can be traced to the real underlying basis of "fatness."

True enough, certain foods such as sweets, oils, creams and greases, may all cause a temporary fatness, but the actual source of permanent obesity, says Dr. Lyon, is in the thyroid and pituitary glands, with all the other internal glands under sus-

Post-mortem and pathological studies prove this. Just as everybody has a touch of tuberculosis in them, so every fat man has something wrong with one or more of his glands.

Fat that seems to be inherited or "run in families," really does not. But the defects in the pineal, pituitary, thyroid or other glands responsible for this "hereditary" fat, pass from one generation to another.

The fact that certain glands are particularly susceptible to these disorders explains why there are five fat married women to every thin married man. It is usually these glands that usually remain thin as long as they do not become mothers of children.

As has been said, the thyroid causes fatness when out of order. And adiposity is by no means the only affliction for which the blame can be laid on this little gland which lies hidden away behind the mouth.

The thyroid is one of what are known as the body's blind ductless glands. Whatever it secretes passes directly into the blood and produces surprising effects on various parts of the body.

When a person's thyroid becomes greatly enlarged it causes the disease known as goitre.

Disorders of the thyroid are almost always thought to be responsible for bad teeth. The secretion of the thyroid seems to supply what serves as mortar for the teeth and when the gland is out of order the teeth crumble away just as a wall does when poor or insufficient mortar has been used.

Lightning in Mountain Ambrooks

What To Do When You See the LIGHTNING'S FLASHES

By SIR RAY LANKESTER.
K. C. B., F. R. S.

THE number of persons killed by lightning every summer shows how necessary it is to warn the public again and again of the danger which they thoughtlessly incur in thunderstorms—danger which they might to a large extent avoid, if not absolutely escape.

It is almost a truism to know better than to seek shelter in a thunderstorm under any solitary upstanding shed, tree or group of trees. The danger arises from the fact that the shed or the tree stands out high above the general surface, and its top is the nearest point, for some distance round, to the thunder-cloud, and is likely to "attract" the electric discharge, or to serve as the passage of the electricity from the cloud to the earth. If the tree or shed were a good "conductor" of electricity, and were fixed deeply in wet earth or water, no harm would be done; the electricity of the earth and of the cloud would quietly adjust themselves by aid of the projecting conductor.

That is a service which "lightning conductors" perform. They are metal rods placed in high, prominent positions where they come into relation with the electrically-disturbed thunder clouds. As there is free passage through them to the vast area of deep-level wet earth and subterranean water, the adjustment between the cloud and the earth is easily and quickly effected. As we say the electric current "flows" through the conductor to—or it may be away from—the earth.

But nothing is so fastidious as the lightning conductor which is not properly "earthed." The upstanding metal rod must end below in a great plate of metal sunk in permanently moist earth, or better, in a down-pipe. When there is not this regular and sufficient outlet for the electric current, as when a lightning conductor is broken from the "earth" or unprovided with such a base, the current behaves like a pent-up stream let loose, and dashes through anything leading ultimately to the soil. It is on this account that trees and wooden sheds are dangerous. They attract the electric current, but are not "good" conductors, and so do not provide a passage to the deep, wet earth.

What, then, is one to do when caught in a thunderstorm? Take shelter in a wood though not under an

Why Your LIFE MAY DEPEND ON How You Behave During a THUNDERSTORM

Isolated tree. Ask for shelter in any available habitation. Failing these, get under a low, wide, low roof, or into a ditch, or any hole—where you can lie flat on the ground. Wet clothes have before now saved life, owing to the fact that they are good conductors, and allow the electric current to pass away harmlessly. It is a very dangerous thing to stand in a thunderstorm, which is close to you, on a tall pole, or a lake or wide river, or on a tree.

When you are in a house during a thunderstorm you should keep the windows shut and avoid placing yourself between two large and prominent conductors of electricity, such as the water-pipe, gas main or the fireplace. If the house is a detached one, or of a small size, and the storm is close, you will be acting reasonably if you retire into the basement. On the other hand, the long rows of houses of fairly equal height in the streets of a great town are about as safe as any place during an electric storm. A railway car on the rails is theoretically very unlikely to be "struck" by lightning, since the rails are a first-class conductor. The Elgin Tower, in Paris, being entirely built of iron, is a lightning conductor, and has been photographed in storms with forked lightning playing harmlessly about its head.

The inhabitants of towns are much more frequently struck by lightning than country folk, because living as a rule in the protection of the streets, they have no traditions and habits to guide them when they are out for a holiday and are overtaken by a thunderstorm in the country. They are both indifferent to the danger and ignorant as to the conditions under which that danger is greatest, and those under which it is reduced to a minimum.

Learned writers on atmospheric electricity and thunderstorms do not trouble themselves to give information as to the precautions which a man should take to avoid being "struck" and what positions are the safest and what the most perilous. On the other hand, they have carried the knowledge of how to protect buildings by aid of lightning conductors to such a point that it has become possible to build a powder magazine which is practically safe from danger in any thunderstorm. This is effected by applying a net work of conducting wire over its surface connected to upstanding metal rods, the bases of which are sunk in permanent subterranean water.

It is important that every one should be able to judge of the nearness or distance of a thunderstorm. The sound of thunder caused by the heating and sudden expansion of the air by the great electric spark which we call "a flash of lightning" travels a mile in five seconds. When there is an interval between the flash and the sound of the thunder of two seconds or more, the storm is for the time being at a safe distance, but when the interval is for less than two seconds, the storm is close, and any prominent object near you to which you may be "struck" is in danger.

The sparks are an inch or two long which may be drawn from the brass collector of an "electric machine" similar to the great electric sparks which are called "lightning" from cloud to cloud or from a cloud to the earth. The little sparks of the electric machine have a sharp crackling noise, and may be made to perform and traverse this glass, leaving a hole to mark their passage. They are but two inches long, a spark which we know as "forked lightning" varies from 100 yards to a mile in length, and in some cases has been estimated to have been ten miles in length. Its destructive power and the noise which it makes are in proportion to the difference of size. The word is often "struck" by the lightning spark, and in many cases causes tubes of fluid to be drawn up, by the penetration of the lightning into the ground. These are called "fountains".

The destruction caused by lightning is more to be feared than the danger which it causes in the destructive and burning action of the current, serious as that is. It is the use of lightning conductors was introduced little more than 150 years ago, church towers and houses of God, in fact, every large and prominent building, was destined to be struck by lightning and more or less completely destroyed in the course of a few centuries. The cathedrals and churches of every country have been, in the course of history, repeatedly struck by lightning and often burnt to the ground. The danger of destruction of buildings by lightning has been greatly reduced. Competent electricians everywhere are occupied in the endeavor to improve their present methods of protection by "lightning conductors". There are several varieties of "lightning" or visible electric discharges in our atmosphere. They are: (1)

1. The Aurora Borealis, or "Northern Lights," better known as the Aurora, is a form of electric discharge in our atmosphere which occurs only near the Arctic and Antarctic regions. Its occurrence is not accounted for, but is accompanied by a blinding or pulsing sound, and is related to the nature of the auroral discharge of the sun. FIREWORKS HATS and Nightgown Dresses

The Fire Fountain Hat of Black Satin, with Superb White Feather Decoration.

The Startling Pinwheel Hat of White Satin, with Delicate White Feathers.

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucky" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, presenting all that is newest and best in style for well-dressed women.

Lady Duff-Gordon's Paris establishment brings her into close touch with the centre of fashion.

Lady Duff-Gordon's American establishment is at Nos. 37 and 39 West Fifty-seventh street, New York.

THE tendency of the early Autumn hats is toward the bizarre, particularly in their decoration. The simple and ever so lovely flower effects which mark the mid-Summer hats is to give way to eccentric effects. I am sending you photographs this week of some hats whose trimming make one think of the fireworks with which you celebrate on your Independence Day.

These hats are in all instances black, with either white or black decorations. The Pinwheel Hat and the Skyrocket Hat are indeed most novel. Their names explain them, I think, and so does the name of the "Fire Fountain" hat.

The "Fire Fountain" hat, especially the one whose brim is wider in front than in back, will be very chic this year. The Watteau shapes, however, have had their day. I am not sorry to see them go, for they were suited to only the most pliant and youthful faces.

There are so many things of which I want to write! It is difficult to limit myself to stated things. My pencil wants to follow my fancy, and if I permitted very far ahead it would wander.

Has the night gown dress reached the United States, I wonder? It is not so outrageous as its name would imply! It is just a dainty, exquisite affair, made of white mull. I am sending you a picture of it.

I am reminded just here to tell you of some lovely new tea gowns and nightgowns which I have just seen. Oh, how true it is that fashion permits you to be either fascinating or freakish just now! It all depends on your own mood.

In the one case you can do a tea gown which is just a clinging softness of white, fluted pleated chiffon, the cross-over corsage held in beneath the bust by a golden girdle formed of a trail of little laurel leaves. There is no other vestige of trimming, and, for once, the white purity of the robe is untouched by the faintest suspicion of pink, the under slips being of white instead of flesh-colored crepe de chine and for chiffer. But, then, to make up for this, the loose, graceful coat which is worn with the little gown, is a glory of color, its outer lining being of vivid Mediterranean blue and the lining of the same fabric in the equally brilliant fuchsia pink, which, after giving a new and elusive beauty of shading to the willing blue, reveals itself more clearly through the broadly bordering insertion of gold lace, which is further enriched by raised broderies of gold. A piping of pink satin gives a finish to the graceful garment, and so here you have the tea gown, entirely and alluringly feminine.

But if you aspire to the wear of trousers, then you can have a "smoking suit" of soft, black satin, patterned with a weird "futurist" fruit design in vivid yellow and dead chalk-white, the foliage being of cruet green. The trousers are gathered into an elastic banding at the waist in front, their fullest being held in about the ankles by the same means, but at the back the quaint garment is cut in one with the coat, which is finished off with black satin lapels and pocket flaps.

So the wearer will secure a sufficiently startling appearance to satisfy her love of sensation. But, all the same, I would not advise any woman to let a man see her arranged in this eccentric garb until she was safely and securely his wife! Else he might back out of a mere engagement as a result of his disillusionment.

Of course, however, if the "trouser" be of Oriental fashioning and trimmings, that is an entirely different matter. For their fabric will then be the most delicately flesh-pink chiffon, and a fringe of gold bullion will finish them off at the ankles. A transparent slip of equally pale pink mull will then be worn over them, and, finally, a loose coat, richly brodered in gold and possibly further adorned with the gold fringe.

Or else just one over garment of gold-brodered mull will be held in about the waist by a deeply swathed and loosely knotted sash, weighted into still more closely clinging position between the filmy draperies by a heavy fringe of gold.

Rather less markedly Eastern in effect, though their inspiration is the same, are the tea gowns whose skirts are arranged with two open flaps for the feet to be passed through, quite a number of Paul Poiret models being thus arranged in season. One is of soft satin of real rose-pink shading, made in the simplest way, and just held in at the waist by a deeply swathed sash of asphodel blue chiffon, fastened on one side with a cluster of silver roses and leaves of gold, the long ends which hang down the left side being fringed with gold. It is a veritable garment of grace and as comfortable as it is charming.

Another Poiret creation and triumph, which is of that same Turkish trouser fashioning, is of broche crepe de chine in the wonderful blue of Delphinium blossoms, its draperies cleverly arranged to show an under robe of pure white satin, while festooned across the corsage in front are endless chains of shining crystal beads, from which hangs pendant from a shining, swirling chain of diamonds a great heart-shaped ornament of mauve crystals and paste, dividing the blue draperies and finally blazing out in a trail of black ground of white.

Another new tea gown model by a very famous Paris house is somewhat too elaborate for comfort and is really almost more suggestive of fancy-dress attire.

For you cannot imagine anyone taking their ease in a closely clinging, shining sheath of ivory net covered completely with myriads of opalescent and Indian silver paillettes, with here and there a definite glint of gold. Just in front the skirt certainly does open over a foam of tulle in leaf green chiffon, but, for this, the slightly trained crinolines are all bordered with water lilies and leaves. And these same decorative blossoms are faithfully imitated in silken and silver brocade and pen painting. As a deep bordering between tall billows, with dragon flies fitting overhead, for the transparent too deep hanging robe of green chiffon, which can further coast of a faint of fringes in soft green silk and shimmering silver. Finally, you must shimmering silver.

Finally, you must know that filmy yellow tulle is folded at the décolleté and drawn into the swathed sash of the same yellow, into whose bow ends just one more water lily is chivalrously fastened.

All of which is undoubtedly very decorative and beautiful, but inasmuch as it is entirely lacking in the comfort and the "allure" which should be the chief characteristics of the tea gown it is by no means an ideal model for choice or copying.

Patching Up Our Bodies With Rubber—Just Like Broken Tires.

A NUMBER of recent experiments by American and foreign surgeons have demonstrated that rubber may be used very effectively as a substitute for human tissues. There are not many substances which can safely be introduced into the human system, and the discovery that rubber can be thus utilized is therefore regarded as a very important one, particularly as this substance is better adapted to surgical work than any other which has so far been used for this purpose.

Hitherto, for instance, silver, platinum, gold, copper and aluminum have been relied upon almost exclusively to repair broken bones and unite severed vessels, but these metals are not only expensive, but difficult to work with. Rubber, on the other hand, is inexpensive and lends itself admirably to manipulation at the hands of the surgeon.

To what extent rubber piping may be used in the future to replace worn-out arteries or other defective blood vessels can only be conjectured, but several experiments along these lines have resulted most satisfactorily. A few years ago Dr. Edward Sullivan, an American surgeon, introduced a rubber tube into a dog's body to replace the biliary ducts between the hepatic canal and the duodenum, and the substitution was entirely successful. Somewhat later a similar achievement was accomplished on a human patient in a case in which the bile duct had been destroyed, the rubber tube which was inserted serving the purpose of a bile duct very satisfactorily.

The danger of inserting a foreign body into the human system lies in the fact that the blood is very susceptible to such interference. If it comes in contact with any substance other than those which nature provides it almost invariably coagulates, and death necessarily follows unless the normal flow of the blood stream is soon restored. It has now been discovered, however, that no coagulation follows the contact of human blood with rubber, and hence the use of this substance is deemed entirely safe.

The reason rubber proves so satisfactory is believed to be because of its colloidal nature, and it possesses many other characteristics of human tissue.

Another very interesting demonstration of the value of rubber for surgical work was given by Dr. Alexis Carrel a few years ago when he removed a piece of the wall of the abdominal sac of a dog and replaced it by a piece of rubber about an inch by an inch and a half in area. The rubber sheet was carefully sutured to the sac and the animal which followed was perfect. Fifteen months later the animal was examined, and it was found that both sides of the rubber patch were covered with tissue.

Sterilized pieces of rubber sponge have been used successfully by Dr. Fischl, the well-known Italian surgeon, to close the aperture in inguinal ruptures, and no harmful effects have followed, and Dr. Debat was similarly successful in the use of a sheet of rubber to repair the abdominal wall of another patient afflicted with hernia.

From the history of the various subjects who have been thus treated with rubber it seems to be scientifically established that this substance may be used to an almost unlimited extent to repair human tissues, to piece together several vessels and eventually perhaps to replace entire organs.

In the repairing of broken bones which fail to reunite naturally it has long been the custom to use plates of silver or platinum, which are riveted to the bone and become a permanent part of the skeleton without any untoward results. Pieces of healthy bone have similarly been used to take the place of bone that has become diseased. Hard rubber may perhaps be found of value for this class of mechanical work, but its greatest sphere will be in the replacing and skinning out of soft tissues.

Rubber lungs, rubber stomachs, even rubber hearts, are not deemed to be beyond the reach of the synthetic surgeons of the future, but for the present perhaps we shall have to be satisfied with the use of this valuable substance for reparative work, in which limited sphere it will undoubtedly prove of incalculable benefit to the human race.

HE great plague and curse of the world, so long feared, has come at last. The nations of Europe are at war. The energies of men and of entire peoples are devoted to hatred and bitterness.

All the hideous and accursed bitterness of the dark ages come back again.

Race hatred, religious hatred rule, justice is forgotten.

There is no strength but that of the strongest murderer, no judgment rendered but on the bloody battlefield.

Of the fourteen hundred millions of human beings on this earth, nearly all pray to some god.

And the nations at war in Europe all pray TO THE SAME GOD. A hideous, pathetic, pitiful sight that God looks down upon, as he turns his eyes toward the praying murderers that look up to Him, each asking for victory.

"Hepl me, O God, to capture that town, though I kill all the women and children," one ruler prays and thinks that God will answer and help him.

"Help me, O God, to defend this city, to kill the men that besiege it, to attack their city in turn and destroy it, though I kill all their women and children," and the praying man believes that God is with him and will help him in his plans of murder.

Butchery by day and night on the water, on the land and in the air, prayers mumbled by blood-stained brutes asking the Creator of the world to help them in their killing, seventeen millions of armed men ready for the game of murder, industry dead, agriculture dead, science, progress, every good power on the earth paralyzed.

AND THAT IS WAR.

This country looks on in horror, and in very humble spirit.

For we are the cousins and the brothers of those that are cutting each other's throat three thousand miles away, pursuing each other to the doors of our coasts, lying in wait like the savage beasts in this picture.

Humbly we recognize that we are part of that civilization with its thin veneer of Christianity and justice, and its ancient, heavy determined love of blood and battle.

We hope to do our duty as a nation fortunate in its position, happy in its neutrality, resolute in the determination to take no side, to express no prejudice, but to sympathize with all upon whom the curse of war has come.

Woodrow Wilson, the President of the United States, has expressed well the determination of the American people to remain absolutely neutral in deed and in thought, and the people endorse the word which he has spoken, as their chief officer, thank him for it and will abide by it.

We have no criticism for any nation, any leader, any of the fighters and conquerers.

But we have a deep sympathy for all of those that suffer, the wounded men that lie in agony on the battlefield, while the vultures wait for them to die, the women and the children suffering the worst agony of terrified affection.

Deeply we sympathize with every nation and every individual.

Our one hope is that the ferocity of the conflict may make it short, that the horrible efficiency of the murder machines may end the work of killing quickly.

And most earnestly we hope that from this chaos of ruin, murder and death, real peace may come in the end.

A dreadful picture this earth presents as it rolls through space stained with the blood of those that were put here to maintain peace and harmony.

Humanity's only excuse is that it has just emerged from the savage stage. It is closely related to the brutes that prowl in the jungle.

The pack of wolves hunting together united in purpose, fall upon their wounded comrade and devour him.

We human beings must admit ourselves another pack of wolves, of prowling beasts.

A body of armed men meets another, rage and fear and battle follow.

A ship on the ocean sees the light of another ship. That means no longer help or friendship, but fight and destruction.

Happy this nation that has taken the advice of the great Washington and kept free from foreign alliances and entanglements!

Happy this land with a great ocean on either side and distance to lend security!

We should be as humble as we are thankful, as eager to help as we are quick to congratulate ourselves.

Above all, we should learn, if there be any good in it, the lesson that Europe is teaching us at such a cost, the lesson of war's horror, of its futility, and its

FOOTLIGHTS FLASH A WELCOME TO FAVORITES; SUMMER SEASON PASSES

'Under Cover' Is Back and the Old Howard's Press Agent Has Gone to Work Again

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Seems like old times to see "Under Cover" in our midst again. It has only been about a month and lots of people probably didn't know it had been away, they had become so accustomed to think that it was located around the corner from Tremont street at the Plymouth.

Most unexpectedly word has come from New York to open the doors of the Shubert Theatre next Thursday night to "The Dancing Duchess," a new and lively Viennese operetta with a big cast and a chorus of Broadway beauties. No the regular theatrical season seems upon us.

The new "Under Cover" opened Saturday afternoon and evening and devoted the receipts to the Helen Relief Fund. The engagement properly begins tomorrow night. The company selected for this production is well balanced and in the opinion of the critics several of the parts are even better cast than they were during the past season. The company will tour New England after the Boston engagement. Meanwhile a New York company opens in a few days in a Broadway theatre, and other companies are being organized to carry the remarkable play to all parts of the country.

At the Majestic, Nance O'Neill begins a week's engagement in "Camille," with the strong support of the Majestic players. It is quite a while since this popular actress has been seen in Boston, while "Camille" never fails to appeal to theatre goers.

Fred Doherty, who writes the extraordinary advertisements for the Old Howard, has relied up his sleeves, filled his fountain pen and set to work. "The Old Howard opens tomorrow with 'The Girl from Minsk,'" and you may expect to read superlatives in the advertising columns.

The Lothrop has taken the Grand Opera House and the Howard bag and baggage, into the camp of the Eastern Wheel, or Columbia Amusement circuit. The Producers wheel is talking inclusions and other things, for it is looking at the two Boston houses will be a severe blow. Although the Eastern Wheel will furnish the entertainment at the Lothrop houses the shows will not be those which the Gaiety and Casino. The Eastern is putting out two wheels.

People who own theatres or are in the business of producing plays have not been favored with improperly large dividends for several years past. The prospects for the coming season seemed attractive, but now the war comes along and leaves everything up in the air.

It may be that the picture of a great European war will make business boom in the United States and this will be the greatest season ever, and it may be that just the opposite will happen.

It does look as though our theatrical table d'hôte during the next year will be more democratic than in the past. French and English plays will not be imported if there are no steamships to bring them over. English critics will not be respected in this country in the wholesale manner of yore, and this is the silver lining of the war cloud.

An English actor is at all right in his own country, where everybody likes to go to see him. He is very acceptable when he can act. In London one sees truly good actors, and occasionally fine actors do pay us visits from the British Isles.

The average English actor who is so popular with some Broadway managers, has only one advantage over the average American actor, he works cheaper. He is always permissible when he is cast to play a British aristocrat, though few British actors know how to play British aristocrats, never having had the opportunity of associating with them. But when he is played into the role of an American (rich and good Americans are expected to allow him accent, his clothes, and his mannerisms, it is a little too much.

The men's criticism may be applied to English actresses. They are at all right in English parts, I remember a season or two ago that a very competent actress with an English accent as thick as a London fog, was cast to play the title role in the "Bohian Princess." No wonder that this beautiful little girl did not succeed in this country as it did in Europe.

No, instead of casting Englishmen in the important roles of our "society dramas," perhaps the managers will give the Americans a chance to wear evening clothes, riding breeches, and golf clothes.

It hardly seems ten years since Nance O'Neill played for many weeks in Boston at the Hollis and other theatres as a varied repertory, with enormous success. Miss O'Neill herself confirms it, however, she says that it was in 1904.

She had come from California with McKee Rankin, and beginning mostly in Boston, soon had won the whole city as Miss Nance O'Neill. Beth and Leah, and in "The Fires of St. John." After many weeks in Boston she went to New York and there could not seem to attract the press and public despite her Boston experiences. There followed some years of road touring and finally Nance brought her to a Broadway triumph in "The Lily." Since then she has been touring the country.

"I remember Nance O'Neill as rather a plump tragedienne and hardly recognized the tall thin blonde woman who was directing the rehearsal of "Camille" at the Majestic Theatre the other day until I heard her voice. It was the same rich, mellow voice and the same clear, clean diction, and though she did not attempt to act at this preliminary rehearsal she read her lines with a nonchalant eloquence.

"Fortunately, I have lost weight. I do not know how," said Miss O'Neill. "I am not glad. It gives me so much more freedom. Now I can play Camille as I have always wished to play her. It is a pity, because I am old play, isn't it? We are getting it in the period of 1910 when the costumes were no picturesque. My arrangement of the play follows the operatic version quite closely, and is much more effective than versions which are frequently used."

"Are you still working with Heland?"

"No. You see Mr. Heland has not found the play which he wanted for me. I waited a year before I accepted other engagements, but he could not find something which suited me. He is a very nice man, but I think he is my greatest producing manager, don't you?"

Heland is a loyal city. It took Nance O'Neill to his heart when she was unknown elsewhere, and Alexander Leary reports that the boxoffice advances paid for the traditions in the harkened old character of all the actresses in the city. Heland is under the stage at the Majestic and likely to remain there. Heland is under the stage at the Majestic and likely to remain there.

By the way, the orchestra is under the stage at the Majestic and likely to remain there. Heland is under the stage at the Majestic and likely to remain there.

Pat McNally, who was a wonderful swimmer in his day, a showman, actor and press agent, has now become royal custodian of the Ziegfeld at Franklin Park. Annette Kellerman, but why talk about Annette, every body knows about her success.

Truly, dramatic subjects might do worse than add swimming to their curriculum.

Conroy is a Harvard graduate, a horseman, fencer and all round athlete. He has written books pertaining to physical training. His part of the show is diving and posing. Lillian Conroy, said to be the most perfectly formed girl of seventeen upon the stage, is one of his models.

All Interested in Cape Cod Pageant

A significant outdoor presentation of the drama and history of the Cape Cod community, called the Pageant of Cape Cod, will be given on the afternoon of next Saturday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, August 15, 16 and 17. This pageant was first presented in 1911 and it is a water, in which all the arts are used to produce a marvellous and varied, and most successful, presentation. The pageant will be presented for the purpose of raising money for the Cape Cod Hospital, and the proceeds will be used for the purpose of raising money for the Cape Cod Hospital, and the proceeds will be used for the purpose of raising money for the Cape Cod Hospital.

Dancing on the sands is all the rage at North and South shore beaches.

Clad in stunning bathing suits, merry Summer girls and their gallant tutees may be seen dancing every day at Battery's Beach, Newport, Little Cove, Manchester-by-the-Sea, Singing Beach, Allerton or other coterie seaside nooks.

Gilting steps are not possible on the sand. To take their place, Mrs. Alice Wynnan, who has devised many pretty dances for the Vincent ballroom, has invented the "North Shore Court," which was no sooner shown than it became popular. Young society people who have tried many dances, are carried away with the new venture of Mrs. Wynnan.

Miss Lillian Kaufman of Riverside Drive, New York, a winner in many contests, and who is stopping on the North Shore, and John Winn, a young engineer in the government service at the Boston Navy Yard, posed the pictures illustrating these new steps.

Here's the way the dance goes:

1. Step—Three steps.

2. Step—Ordinary waltz, rather open, left shoulders nearly touching.

3. Step—Walk three steps. Man advances, right, left, right. Woman retreats, right, left, right. (Count 1, 2, 3.)

4. Step—Quarter face and walk three steps. Both facing same direction. Man, right, left, right, and woman, left, right, left. (Count 4-5-6.)

5. Step—Man, quarter turn the woman directly face him and walk four steps. Man advancing, woman retreating. (Count 1-2-3-4.)

6. Step—Man, left foot up behind in slight attitude and a slight rise on stationary foot. Woman lifts right foot. (Count 5-6.)

7. Step—Repeat the previous figure.

8. Step—Repeat, alighting the last and leaving the woman under man's left arm, finishing with her on his right side and facing the same direction. Step in circle in "kissing position." Woman on right side, man's right arm back of woman's waist. Both left hands joined and center foot. The left hands remain centered throughout the figure.

9. Step—Walk three steps. (Left, right, left, counting 1-2-3-4.)

10. Step—Repeat the previous figure.

11. Step—Repeat, alighting the last and leaving the woman under man's left arm, finishing with her on his right side and facing the same direction. Step in circle in "kissing position."
